LEGRAND S. STRANG. Stricken with Apoplexy Monday Morning and Died Monday

Afternoon. LeGrand S. Strang, for many years one of Amsterdam's jeading jewelers, died at his home in Amsterdam, on Monday afternoon. Mr. Strang was stricken with apoplexy early Monday morning. At midnight Mrs. Strang bade him good night and he was then apparently in his usual health. At 6 o'clock she entered his room and found him in a state of unconsciousness, from which he did not rally. Dr. H. M. Hicks was at once summoned and Flags were conspicuously displayed from most of the business houses in Hoosick Falls, Saturday, as well as on several private residences and the post-office and First National bank, in commemoration of the battle of Walloom-scoick, called the battle of Bennington, fought August 16, 1777. This is the first anniversary of the event when residents there have manifested their loyalty in so general a display of flags and decorations.
