Charlie Williams, who was connected with baseball for more than a quarter of a century as business manager, club screetary, etc., and who recently resigned his job with the Cubs, had many amusing experiences with ball players. "About the funniest one," relates Williams, "had to do with a youth who got a tryout with the Cubs some years ago. He showed up fairly well in the training camp, and we decided to carry him along for the exhibition stimes.

"After dinner one night in one of the hotel elevator and rushed at me." "Say, I want a piano in my room, foo, he demanded.

"I looked at him in surprise." "Why a piano? I asked.

"The king the winter of 134-1515 Jec Tinker was bominared with letters from a fellow who claimed he was a University of Michigan man and the son of cristocratic and wealthy parents," continued Williams. "He insisted he was a great ball player and that loe would make the mistake of his life if the diln't rick him up. His letters so impressed doe that he decided to take the kid south with him on the training trip of the Chicago Feds.
