LEW SHANK IS KEPT BUSY

He Had to Direct the Entertainment for Four Thousand.

Lew Shank was the keynote at the Summer Mission Benefit at the Fair Grounds yesterday afternoon. Not one of the four thousand persons in attendance was satisfied that he had his money's worth until he had seen Lew Shank. He was in constant demand from the time the gates opened until they closed. When the automobile racers wanted water for their radiators nobody except Lew Shank could get it. When one of Wes Stout's trotter's hopples was broken nobody except Lew Shank could fix it, and when a woman in the grand stand wanted a glass of lemonade it was Lew Shank who left the adjustment of a dispute as to the entries in the slow mule race to get it for her.

The dispute about the slow race was caused by the scratching of one of the entries after the other animals had come out on the track. The other owners, being principally Charley Shover, declared their mules should not start until the entry fee had been forfeited to the purse. And they wrangled, while the great audience in the grand stand, on the grass plot and sitting in carriages and automobiles about the track grew impatient. Finally they demanded Lew Shank with one mighty voice. When he returned and
