

GREINER KNOT AGAIN TIED

Motor Over New York to Find a Minister to Officiate.

NOTORIETY IS A HANDICAP.

Bride Tells Women to Hate Men, Then They'll Be Able to Love 'Em Better.

New York, Oct. 24.—[Special.]—Miss Gladys Sykes, who was once Mrs. Arthur Greiner, became Mrs. Arthur Greiner again tonight, though not until she, young Mr. Greiner, and a small bridal party had motored over the town trying to get a minister to marry them.

The Rev. F. H. Allen, a retired Congregational clergyman, finally performed the ceremony in the drawing room of his apartment at the San Remo hotel. Then the newlyweds and their friends went to pass the evening at the theater.

All of the clergymen to whom Mr. Greiner appealed refused to marry him to his former wife because of the newspaper notoriety that had accompanied his arrival from Chicago and his subsequent hurried courtship of Gladys Sykes, who since her separation and up to tonight was an avowed hater of men.

Remarriage Delightful Game.

Mrs. Greiner, who is a blonde with brown eyes and dark eyebrows, said that getting married to your divorced husband was a delightful sensation and is far more interesting than marrying him the first time.

She offered another remark, too, which she said was one of her richest plums of wisdom, and she offered it by way of advice to young women. She said it is a good thing for young women to hate men, for then when they have ceased to hate them they will be able to love 'em better.

Hard to Find Accommodating Pastor.

The search for a minister began when a taxicab chugged the corner and Gladys Sykes stepped to the sidewalk.

She was quickly followed by Arthur Greiner, amateur automobile racer, young man of leisure, divorced husband and husband to be all in one. Mme. Frances, a close friend of the bride, stepped from the machine last. Mme. Frances is a theatrical costumer. She was gowned in—well, anyway, she is a theatrical costumer.

At the entrance of the little Church Around the Corner they were greeted by Nat Springold, husband of Mme. Frances; by Miss Virginia Sykes, the bride's sister; by Miss Ethel Rappe, hater of men and a friend of the bride, and by bad news. Nat Springold broke the bad news.

Finally Get Knot Tied.

He said that the rector had refused to perform the marriage ceremony when he had learned that the bride and groom had been divorced because it is a practice of the Episcopal church not to wed divorced couples.

So the little party made its way around from one minister to another until they finally found one to oblige.

MORE THAN 15,000 ATTEND DAIRY EXPOSITION OPENING.

Exhibits and Events in Arena Draw Big Crowds to International Amphitheater at the Stockyards.

With more than 15,000 visitors in attendance the seventh annual national dairy exposition opened last night at the International amphitheater at the stockyards. One of the exhibits which attracted particular attention is a complete pasteurization plant. This will be in operation every day and evening until the close of the show on Nov. 2.

Besides the many exhibits the events in the arena proved interesting. First there was the judging of the prize cows by student teams from agricultural colleges. At the conclusion of the show two scholarships will be awarded to the young men who have made the best record. Then came the dairy maids' chorus, which sang and danced.

In the butter making contest the wives of dairy farmers competed. There were more than twenty-five women entered in this event and they made butter in the old fashioned way—with churns and the exercise of considerable muscle.

After the butter makers left the arena there was thirty minutes of athletics, in which members of the Chicago high schools competed. After this there came the horse show and then a pushball contest.
