

POLICE ARE GATHERING IN THE "SMOOTH" GENTS

WISH TO PREVENT POCKET
PICKING DURING RACES.

SIX GO TO THE WORKHOUSE

They were merely gentlemanly idlers. They were doing "nothing for nobody." The police feared they might do something to somebody during the invasion of the motor enthusiasts, so they sent them to the prisoners' dock in police court, charged with being loiterers. Now they're making little ones out of big ones at Judge Whallon's employment agency in West Twenty-first street. Six of them will now stand for an interview to the effect that it is all rot about this being "no mean city."

The police have put their weather eyes to work on suspicious looking characters who might be attracted here by the automobile races. Six of that type fell under their gaze last night and six went to the workhouse this morning, an indication that the police were good guessers.

Two Chicago "Gents."

The neatest looking pair in the outfit were George Hogarty and James Ryan, Chicago gents. Hogarty has a prison record for being clever at putting his hands into other people's pockets. His picture hangs in the Indianapolis rogues' gallery, but he didn't know it, he said, until Captain of Detectives Manning told the court. Then Hogarty threw down his hand. Ryan, the good looking with him, talked innocent and nice.

"I just met up with Hogarty at Lafayette," he said, sweetly. "I was on my way

"I just met up with Hogarty at Lafayette," he said, sweetly. "I was on my way to Louisville and he asked me to stop off and see a girl with him. The girl was in a show here and he wanted me to see her. See?"

Captain Manning and Lieutenant Kinney found the pair sitting in the shade of the statehouse dome late last night. Judge Whallon thought that inasmuch as the state fair is coming along pretty soon it wouldn't do Hogarty and Ryan any good to see the pumpkins and the squashes, so he signed a ticket that said "30 and thirty days" in each case.

Jabines Goes to Workhouse.

A blond young man by the name of Felix Jabines also told the old dog Tray story. He said he had left the Seile-Floto show at Bloomington and was going to join Barnum & Bailey at Richmond Sunday. He came to Indianapolis and "met up with" James Longmeyer and Harry Higgins, two Indianapolis young men who have known for a long time that the prisoners' dock is painted yellow. Jabines's "meeting up" with them caused him to be assigned to the workhouse to break rock for 30 and costs and ten days. Longmeyer and Higgins went with him.

Ned Day, colored, sat around alley entrances on the north side last night and several people noticed him. Finally the bicycle police happened through one of the alleys and Ned has gone to the workhouse for a sojourn covering a fine of $25 and costs and thirty days.
