made the long run with only one stop and that for fuel.

Two accidents marred the afternoon's sport, though one of them inflicted no injury on man. Herbert Lytle driving his underslung American speedster in the ten-mile handicap, was thrown from his machine during the last lap of the race and his left leg was broken above the knee. His mechanic William Clifton of Philadelphia, was slightly injured, his right shoulder being sprained. The big car was reduced to a wreck.

The accident occurred on the straightaway between the two upper turns of the track when the rear tires of the machine blew within thirty feet of each other and sent the car careening into the soft dirt when traveling at the rate of ninety miles an hour.

Dawson's Car Is Wrecked.

The other spill came in the Wheeler-Schebler Trophy contest when Dawson, in a Marmon "thirty-two," lost a tire on the back stretch and his car skidded into the soft dirt at the side of the track, going into the fence after turning a complete somersault with the pilot at the wheel. The car bounded away from the fence and hit it again, going through.
Dawson then managed to bring it to a stop, and escaped without a scratch. The wheels of the car were stripped to the hubs. In the annals of the Speedway there has been no more peculiar accident which resulted without serious injury to the driver.

The Wheeler-Schebler was a classic contest that will live long in the history of motor racing, because of the remarkable performance of both pilots and machines. The winner sent his car through space at the rate of 72.12 miles an hour throughout the long, grueling race, and stopped but once to take on fuel. The even pace which Harroun maintained through the race seemed to be regulated mechanically and the consistent manner in which he drove undoubtedly saved his motor the severe strain that caused many others in the contest trouble and delay.
Around and around the regular hum of the motor sounded, and not once did a cylinder miss or spark plug foul for the Arab.

In the start Chevrolet, in a Buick "one hundred," took the lead and set the pace until his teammate, Burman, driving another of the big white machines, overtook Chevrolet and Harroun, who was trailing the Swiss closely. For ten miles Wild Bob made speed that caused the spectators to ask, "Will he keep it up?"

Lynch Finishes Second.

Kincade trailed Harroun at the end of the first ten miles and Chevrolet was fourth. Lynch in a Jackson then started the performance which aside from wintically a full attendance, and ear-tion was given him.

Foremost in the answer of the
to the charge stood his assertion had been formulated by the Chica-one with the purpose of destrwhich Mr. Lorimer had organized cluding he offered a resolution caa senatorial investigation of the such other additional help as Referred to Committee.

Senator Lorimer's resolution v-ferred under the rules to the Comon Contingent Expenses.

In opening Mr. Lorimer said:
"Mr. President—I rise to a ques-personal privilege to state the faccerning and the reasons for the m-cent assault made upon me by the go Tribune with the intent to blacharacter with the people of the and to destroy me and my friends cially and politically."

He then detailed the fact of the une's publication on April 1 las-story over the signature of Cha-White, a member of the Illinois I-ture, in which it was alleged that procured his seat in the Senate bribery and corruption.

"I have been compelled," he w-
"to defer my return" to the Senate to the fact that the story was tim-published with a deliberate pur-

Chicago which I have been org-

"The assault was made to previts purpose, but it required my c-attention to build an impregnawork around the bank to safeguinterests of those who have in-their funds to the care of my ass-

Lynch Finishes Second.

Kincade trailed Harroun at the end of the first ten miles and Chevrolet was fourth. Lynch in a Jackson then started the performance, which aside from winning the race, was the most creditable of the event. The Jackson motor began the steady work that marked it throughout the race and carried Lynch across the final wire second only to the Marmon yellow car. Throughout the entire distance the Jackson car never stopped, its motor working perfectly all the way, and carrying the car along at an average rate of about seventy-one miles an hour. This spelled the doom of cars which made better time in spurts, but put their motors and tires in bad condition with the strain, for Lynch surely crept up on each opponent until all but Harroun had seen the rear wheels of the drab car with the former star of the diamond seated at the wheel.

Harroun took the race lead in the fifteenth mile and never relinquished it after that time. Dawson, his teammate, took second place and held it against all bidders when Burman's Buick, which had been within a quarter of a mile of the leader all of the time, blew out a tire in the sixty-first mile. In the next mile, however, the Marmon driven by Dawson went through the fence, and Lynch, in his Jackson, began to figure, working up from fourth place, as Chevrolet and Burman were held at the pits again by accidents to tires and cylinders.

Knox Car's Tire Blows Out.

Barney Oldfield, in his Knox "six," looked like a contender when the race started. ~~the~~ brown car did not respond to touch as it ought, and he was sent back to seventh place in the first two laps. He maintained an even pace, though, which has won him the gold in other long events, and began to creep up on the leaders, when, in the fifty-seventh mile, he gave the spectators a thrill of real excitement. As the Knox entered the first turn from the previous lap, the rear wheel was so sprung that it struck the ground and the car rolled on its side. The driver jumped out and ran to the edge of the track, but he was unable to get up the bank, and he was left to the mercy of the spectators. The car was towed off the track and was damaged beyond repair.

"It is also plain to be seen," he continued, "that every word was passed upon a lawyer before it was signed by that low creature White, who does not hesitate to commit forgery for a few dollars to whom perjury is no crime, who is on the lowest fringes of depravity and who to secure money to satisfy his insatiable instinct for debauchery sold what little left of his manhood and became the tool of the Tribune in this timed and malicious attack."

Defends Charles Luke.

Defending Charles Luke, a deputy member of the Legislature, against the charge that he had been a beneficiary of his (Lorimer's) bribery, the senator declared how Mr. Luke, a Democrat, had been practically his deathbed to vote for him, a Republican, but without any other motive than friendship.

"Standing in this historic chamber in a place of high honor, to which my dear friend did all in his power to assist me, I would," he said, "be untrue to our friendship and my high regard for him if I did not hurl this malicious, heartless, and untrue charge back into the foul mouth that uttered it."

Senator Lorimer then proceeded to utter unmeasured words of bitter invective and epithet in attack upon Medill McCormick personally.

He asserted that Representatives and Beckermeyer had not made charges, as had been charged, but, on the contrary, said that the charges stated in the Tribune, dated April 10, the incorrectness of the Tribune, suggested only the feeble signature of their weak editor.

Senator Lorimer went on with more references to assert that the Chicago paper "had and know it had" in referring that Senator Luke used to perjure himself.

As the Knox entered the first turn from the stretch a rear tire blew out and in another half second the demountable rim had loosened and the tire rolled on up the incline and reposed against the wall. The Knox galloped wildly for a second or two, then Barney put it under control and completed the two-and-a-half-mile lap on the rim. An ovation was tendered him when he drove to the pits for another tire. He was hopelessly out of the race, though, and finished outside of the Senator Lorimer then proceeded to use unmeasured words of bitter invective and epithet in attack upon Medill McCormick personally.

He asserted that Representative Beckemeyer had not made any statement, as had been charged, but, on the contrary, said that "the charges against them stood April 30, the uncorroborated lies of the Tribune, supported only by the bought signature of their weakling White."

Senator Lorimer went with incredible vehemence to assert that the Tribune paper "lied and knew it lied," in saying that money was used to purchase his election.

"Not one dollar was paid to a member of the General Assembly to vote for me," the senator declared, and added that when the truth was known everybody would understand that it was the Tribune of the article by White.
