

Germans Granted Two Hours to Pick Up Dead From the Battle Field Before Liege

LIEGE CITY IS UNDER FIRE

TROOPS OF THE KAISER ARE AGAIN BESIEGING THE CITY WITH REVERSES.

MANY GERMANS KILLED

The Brandenburg Guard, Crack German Regiment, Wiped From Face of Earth in Engagement.

The twenty-four hour armistice asked for by the Germans before Liege in order that the dead and wounded from the forty hours from continuous fighting before that city might be buried and cared for was refused, but instead two hours were granted for the work that could not be completed within less than a week's time. However, the Germans made the best of the situation, and while the white flag waved they hurried here and there gathering the dead, piling them into great piles, and sprinkling over a bit of earth that the sun might be deprived of further disfigurement.

The minute that the two hours' time had expired shot and shell began flying in every direction. The

WAR DECLARATIONS.
The following declarations of war have been made:
July 28: Austria declared war on Servia.
August 1: Germany declared war on Russia.
August 4: Germany declared war on Belgium.
August 4: Germany declared war on France.
August 4: Germany and England declared war on each other.
August 6: Austria declared war on Russia.

Germans made another flying attack upon the forts of Liege, all three of the Kaiser's corps which took part in the battle are said to have been wiped completely from the face of the earth. The dispatch which brought this information is dated at Brussels and says that 1,500 of the Brandenburg guard, the crack German regiment, were either killed or injured by the explosion of a mine by electricity in front of the fort of Liege, when the regiment made a flying dash upon the enemy. The Brussels dispatch further says that no less than 120,000 Germans and 65,000 Belgians are engaged in today's battle. The German artillery kept up a constant fire all morning upon the fortifications about Liege and were successful in a way of battering down the walls. The German

MONTGOMERY CHANCES GOOD

BELIEVED DAVIESS COUNTY TOWN WILL LAND BIG PLANT.

MADE BEST SHOWING

Canvass of Southern Indiana and Illinois Shows Barr Metropolis in the Lead.

Montgomery's chances for landing the $200,000 plant to be erected by the Helvetia Milk Condensing company are bright. Business men of the bustling Barr township town are taking an active interest in pushing the claims of their neighborhood and there is a general feeling that this county will be favored by the company. Many neighborhoods in southern Indiana and southern Illinois were investigated by representatives of the company and the showing of Daviess county ranked the highest. While no decision has been made by the Helvetia people, residents of Barr township and Montgomery be-
