

same time large numbers of machines were still banked against the curb in all the principal streets and moved about in the noisy tangled traffic at the corners and between corners.

Sidewalks were thronged with pedestrians, and the speedway, although drawing its thousands at the start of the five-places by a regular chain system of militiamen stationed at intervals of over fifty feet or so.

There was not a gate or a place where a watchman was needed which did not have at least three or four of the disciples of Mars on the job. Courteous, yet firm, they afforded protection to every

RELIEVES BRAGG

DE PALMA.

Quit race with Mercer No. 21. Took Bragg's place in Mercer No. 13.

hundred-mile race, had not pulled from the streets the usual volume of traffic, one within his rights, yet allowed no to slip anything over. The manner