BIG PARADE CALLED OFF, CAUSING DISAPPOINTMENT.

AUTOISTS FROM DISTANCE

---

The autoists are holding a convention this afternoon at Glens Valley hill, seven miles southwest of Indianapolis, on the Three Notch road. Racing on the hill or a hill-climbing contest, is the occasion of the gathering. Forty autoists qualified for the tests by weighing in at the hay market scales in Kentucky avenue this morning. Many of them are entered in more than one event.

The big parade which was expected to bring out more automobiles than were ever before seen in an Indianapolis procession, was called off last night for the reason that there was not sufficient time to include that feature. As a result there was a great deal of disappointment, hundreds of persons having been on the lookout for the autoist army.

Several Indiana autoists arrived in the city this morning for the purpose of witnessing and taking part in the hill-climbing contests.
