ORMOND, Fla., Jan. 25.—Marriott of Newton, Mass., came within an ace of being instantly killed, and the Stanley bug was destroyed on the Ormond course early this afternoon. The experience was such as few spectators who witnessed the same would care to have repeated. It was a happening that sent a thrill of horror from one end of the course to the other. The wonder of it all is that Marriott was not killed.

Marriott and the "bug" had just started on his third and what proved to be his last attempt to lower his one-mile record. He had gone three miles down the beach from the starting point in order to get a start. To all appearances he was going well and fast enough to get within the record as he crossed the line.

The front part of the hood was seen to rise up slightly, and as the frail car took a light bump it jumped high up in the air, the hood opening up like the mouth of an alligator. Hardly a second was the car in the air and yet it jumped along for twenty yards. That was long enough for the wind to blow the craft sideways, making it unmanageable. When the machine struck the ground it rolled over several times and then broke apart, the boiler going into the water, the wheels pinning Marriott to the ground.

Asks How Is the Car.

George Morgan was among the first on the scene and with him was W. W. Haynes. Marriott was picked up and carried in to the clubhouse. Here medical attention was plentiful. Marriott was conscious throughout, the first thing he asked being, "How is the car?" He seemed to have no fear or anxiety for himself. Nevertheless, he, as well as the others, was glad to learn that no bones were broken.

He complained about his back hurting him. Unless internal troubles result Marriott will unquestionably come out of his troubles, although the doctors will not give any decided opinion for the next thirty-six hours.

There is no question but that the frailty of the car, a mere shell mounted on wheels, saved Marriott's life. A tremendous crowd gathered around the point of the accident and tonight thousands of pieces of the record breaking car had been carried away as souvenirs.

Twice before this had Marriott endeavored to break the one-mile record. There was a good wind to his back and Sad Ending to Big Tourney.

It was indeed a sad ending to the speedy and nery driver and his car, likewise to the 1907-Ormond-Daytona Motor Tournament. Previous to the trial three races had been ridden and won. The Florida East Coast Club championship had been captured by Laughlin in a Cleveland runabout; Capt. Hutton, in a Rolls-Royce, had defeated Dr. Stinson, in a Franklin, in a six-mile match race, and Mr. Laughlin defeated his friend, Mr. Bond, in six miles, both using Cleveland runabouts. Raye Oneman managed to still further reduce his world's motor cycle record, bringing it down to 44 2-5 seconds. H. Ernest Rogers of Boston, in his Vanderbilt steamer, made 41 2-5, the fastest mile he had

Here are two pictures of Bob Fitzsimmons, who has held more pugil championships at the same time than any man living and who seeks to prove his claim that he is no back number by competing on a match with Tommy Burns, a clever and useful Detroit fighter who has perched near the top notch of the pugil championships. ever ridden, and Baldwin, in a Stanley, made 42 2-5 seconds.

The fact that Rogers did so well in his car, which was 10 seconds to the slower than the ill-fated "bug," is a reason to expect that the record would be 27 or lower for the mile. As now, the chances are that the present record of 28 1-5 seconds will be standing for some time to come. It is a well-developed and well-defined position to the running of such cars as the one driven by Marriott.

It is realized, however, that in all business such cars can not be barred from competition. This has been argued and again and was gone over to a considerable degree in the meeting of officials held at the conclusion of the meet. In the course, these men can not determine what shall or what shall not be in racing, but the opinion expressed was that the real machine was one that could travel distances up to 100 miles, and that it
