VERTREES ROASTS THE PRESS.

Attorney for Ballinger Lets Loose His Wrath Before the Committee.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—In opening his statement before the congressional committee yesterday afternoon, Mr. Vertrees, counsel for secretary Ballinger, made a scathing denunciation of the press for its attitude toward the Ballinger-Pinchot case and said the only commendation the newspaper men seemed to obey was, "give us this day our daily bread."

Speaking broadly and smiling on the committee, Mr. Vertrees, began his reply by counsel on the other side of the case. "I can not but admire the subtlety of the talk," he said, referring to the statement just made by Mr. Pepper, attorney for Clifford Pinchot. Then, referring to the remarks of both Mr. Brandeis and the chief of these gentlemen told us what a "credulous and whisky-walky man" secretary Ballinger was. That was the comment of Mr. Brandeis. Now the "gentleman," Mr. Pepper, finds him a "controlling every man around him" and "controlling every man around him" and "controlling every man around him." "I shall say, shall be addressed to the committee table, and then the Former Secretary Garfield and former Forester Pinchot came in for most severe castigation from attorney Vertrees, who did not hesitate to denounce them as disappointed men who sought revenge on the new secretary. He declared that Garfield and Pinchot used the water power sites question as a mere pretext and sham, and practiced duplicity in the course they had adopted. These two officials, said Mr. Vertrees, regarding themselves as "faithful stewards," believed they had a right to do to ask that this committee shall deal with the case upon the basis of a criminal prosecution, or that there must be proof beyond a reasonable doubt, even if there was a well founded suspicion that, as a public officer, he was at fault, you ought to say so." At considerable length, Mr. Vertrees discussed the subject of conservation, "in a just and proper sense," he said, "we are all conservationists, and, as such, there is none more so than Mr. Ballinger. Now I am talking about these men who have gone to seed in conservation—men of the Pinchot brand, thirty-third degree conservationists. We have some people running the entire interlocking system is out of commission. It will be rebuilt at once.
