The above picture represents a Premier car as it will look when stripped for action in the first big annual fall race for stock touring machines. This event is attracting much attention all over the country. It is of local interest because two Indiana men, H. O. Smith of the Premier Company and Edgar Apperson of the Apperson Company were the real founders of this event, which will be a supreme test of the American touring car. The rules which determine the basis of equity for the size and regulation of the machines make it such that every machine will be thoroughly tried in every point of its equipment and at the same time all sizes of cars will have an equal opportunity to capture the race.
