The inevitable automobile bill has made its appearance in the Legislature, but it is not accompanied by the storm of popular protest that sought expression in so many drastic bills two years ago. The vehicle itself has been improved, horses and their drivers have become accustomed to it and a sobering sense of responsibility is developing among the increasing numbers who use the motor cars.

No words are too strong to condemn the reckless driver of a machine who needlessly injures person or property by fast driving or throws women and children into fright with possible serious results. The Legislature is likely to take a serious view of such offenses and should do so. Perhaps the greatest need there is in the field of auto regulation is some system that will bring the stern hand of the law down upon irresponsible chauffeurs who run wildly, often when alone with their machine, away from the watchful, restraining eye of the proprietor. Accidents are likely to be the outcome of such cases, and punishment of some sort should be at hand for reckless young fellows who take out machines they do not own and run them about at breakneck speed, in imminent danger not only to the machine itself, but to persons and animals in their path.

Perhaps the sense of responsibility which always exerts a sobering effect upon automobile owners is the eventual solution of this vexed problem of speed, for there are cases when three miles an hour in a crowded street would be more criminally culpable than forty miles an hour on a smooth stretch of country road where not a human being or vehicle of any sort is in sight. The result aimed at is safety, and to attain this end personal care and consideration are more effective than any law can be.

Proposed Regulative Bill.

The bill before the Legislature at this session re-enacts the present speed limits of eight miles an hour in the "business and closely built up portions" of towns and cities, fifteen miles in other parts of town, and twenty miles in the country, and then adds this clause:

Upon approaching a bridge, dam, sharp curve or steep descent, and also in traversing such bridge, dam, sharp curve or steep descent, a person operating a motor vehicle shall have it under control and operate it at a rate of speed not exceeding one mile in fifteen minutes (that is, four miles an hour), and upon approaching a crossing of intersecting highways at a speed not greater than is reasonable and proper, having regard to the traffic then on such highway and the safety of the public.

A slight amendment is made to Section 5 of the present law, relating to passing teams, by requiring the
